

Why?

- The current social conditions in Europe and in the project partner countries in particular, are not friendly towards young job seekers who often seek for opportunities in the bigger cities or abroad.

This initiative comes from the real need of young people to find appropriate jobs in their local geographically remote areas (not far from where they live). Very often in rural areas young people face geographical, economic and social obstacles are at high risk of social exclusion.

- The RAY project will contribute to the social inclusion of young people in rural areas by an innovative Job Search Platform for youth which will work as a meeting point between young job seekers and employers from local rural areas. In addition, the project will empower young people through the Cutting-edge Training on job search.

What?

- Job-search and social inclusion platform for youth in rural areas;
- Online space for youth to showcase their skills and talents;
- Online space for employers to present their needs and expectations so that young people and employers can match and contribute to the economic development of the rural areas.

With whom and to whom?

- Young people from rural areas, especially marginalized youth and young adults looking for a job, school and university students, vocational trainees, NEETs, etc.
- Youth organisations, schools and other public and private training providers.
- Employers (rural businesses - SMEs).
- Decision makers in public administration and organizations who are working in youth employment (public employment services and other national/regional actors, chambers of commerce, development agencies, youth councils etc.)

How?

By designing, developing, delivering and testing a new innovative Job Search Platform which will work as a meeting point between young job seekers and relevant employers from local rural areas.

To support young people in their job research and in the acquisition of job search competence.

Blended mobility of 17 disadvantaged young people between 19 and 30 years of age from 4 different countries (IT, BG and PT and Slovenia) supported by 4 youth workers.

Multiplier events in the partners' regions: Job Fair in Bulgaria, Round Table discussion in Slovenia, Info Day in Italy and Showcase Event in Portugal.
